A wonderful helper in mixing and preparing hen food is a good stationary or portable boiler. The illustrations here given show the construction of a furnace for out-of-door use. Fig. 1 is the completed structure with terra cot-ta chimney and sheet iron roof. There should be a sheet iron door or shutters inclosing the front. It is always advisable as a matter of economy to have a wooden lid to cover the boiler.

Fig. 2 shows how to set the boiler and construct the flue. An open flue (C,C) is left all around the boiler (A), except at one side of the chimney. Here the wall is built up solid against the boiler.

An opening is left from the fire box (B) so that the heat and smoke will enter the flue and pass around the boiler before reaching the chimney. As will be perceived, this arrangement makes the best possible use of the fire, so that a very little fuel will do a great

It is better, as a rule, to have a cooking apparatus like this in a house. The boiler should not hold less than 20 gal lons, and for large flocks of poultry, and especially where the pigs are to have the benefit of it, it should hold 30 or 40

The contents of a boiler set in brick, as we have described, will simmer and cook for several hours after the fire is out and keep warm for a whole day and night.—Farm Journal.

POULTRY PARASITES.

They Can Be Destroyed by Fumigating the Hen House Properly.

If a henhouse is fumigated with sulphur properly, this is the surest method supplies, and have your plumbing of killing lice, as well as all kinds of | done by the germs, such as cholera and roup.

In order to make sure that nothing can live, while the sulphur is burning the house must be made as tight as pos-This is best done by pasting strips of wrapping paper along the casement of the windows, around the slides and on any other cracks that can be found. If the joist does not fit closely, fill in the space with pieces of twisted newspapers. All this could be done with profit for the sake of the warmth gained, even if you do not wish to fumigate. Be sure the ventilators are securely closed, and that the door you leave by fits snugly.

For a henhouse, large enough for 100 hens, five pounds of common stick sulphur is sufficient. Break this up in 11.40 a.m. daily and 8.51 a.m. daily ex eces of about an inch square, put it into two iron or tin vessels that do not leak. Place these on the floor of the henhouse, one at each end; pour over the sulphur somewhat less than a pint of alcohol-wood alcohol is much cheaper than the pure alcohol and just as good for this purpose. Quickly touch a match to this before the alcohol has time to evaporate; close the door and leave the lice to their fate. In a short time the air should be so thick that when looking through the window you cannot see over two feet. Leave the henhouse shut up for a couple of hours; then open the doors and ventilate, and in an hour the atmosphere will be perfectly livable. Using alcohol and sulphur is much cheaper and better than buying sulphur candles, which cost a ridiculous sum and burn so slowly that they are little better than useless .- M. P. Harris, in Country Gentleman.

Selection of a Cockerel. While good size is an item in the selection of a male, activity is fully as important. An extra large cockerel is apt to be sluggish and clumsy when matured. The best plan is to choose a male bird of medium size, compact, active and vigorous, and also to be careful that he was hatched carly. In this case he will be reasonably well matured when mated for breeding, and If the flock is largely composed of hens, the produce should show an improvement in the flock. If pullets are the mainstay for the coming season, it will be better to secure a two or threeyear-old male.-Western Plowman.

PREVENTIVE AGAINST COLDS. Berman's Novel Method of Reeping the Feet Warm in Cold Weather. Warm feet during wet weather are the best preventive against so-called "colds" and their often dangerous consequences. Rubber shoes and cork soles have been pretty generally used to avoid getting cold and wet feet, but a new and very curious means to warm the feet has recently been patented by Paul Wonneberger, of Gruna, near Dresden, says the Philadelphia Record. He calls his invention "heatable shoes." Within the heel of the shoe, which is hollowed out, there is a receptacle for a glowing substance, similar to that used in the Japanese hand-warmers. Between the soles, imbedded in asbestos covers, there is a rubber bag, which is filled with water. The water is heated above the beel, and as it circulates while the wearer of the shoe is walking it keeps the entire nether surface of the foot | Feb4 3t. warm. A small safety valve is provided, and the bag cannot burst. The warmth about eight hours. The shoes are little,

WHAT WE ARE WE SHALL CONTINUE TO BE---

The always reliable pharmacy of Tazewell, and general headquarters for drugs and everything in the drug line. Remember this: There's one thing on earth that must always be above suspicion; that's drugs. Your doctor knows precisely how certain medicines will act upon the system and when he specifies a particular kind of drug he has scientific reasons for so doing. He means just what he writes in the prescription and not something else "just as good." The recovery or death of many of his patients rests with the druggist.

WE FULLY REALIZE THIS GREAT RESPONSIBILITY

Every time we compound a prescription. We KIE back up the doctors knowledge and judgment by furnishing the exact quantity and quality of ' drugs and medicines required. We solicit the patronagof all thoughtful and justice loving people.
